MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

Greetings Windermere Rotary Fily

It is my pleasure to serve as your 2022-2023 President.

Our new Club board of directors had its first meeting last Wednesday evening. We covered many subjects, including fundraising needed to support our service activities. The board agreed that we should move ahead with a fundraiser this fall at Top Golf. It is a fun event where people can enjoy hitting or watching others hit a few balls at targets in the driving range, have a nice dinner, meet other folks, and participate in the silent auction and 50/50 raffle.

To make this event successful we need the involvement and support of all the members. The first key item to success is for the members to sell tickets so we can fill a full floor at Top Golf with 180 to 200 people. The second key item is to arrange for items to be included in the silent auction. Think about people / businesses you know who would like to support Rotary by donating to the auction. By working on this now, we can ensure a successful and fun event.

See you all on Monday evening, 6PM, at Burntwood Tavern at 5078 Dr. Phillips Blvd.

Yours in Rotary Service - Jim

LATEST NEWS (NBC News))

In 2020, New York University researchers identified a multitude of genes that could affect a person's susceptibility to the coronavirus. In particular, they found that inhibiting certain genes that code for a receptor known as ACE2, which allows the virus to enter cells, could reduce a person's likelihood of infection. Sanjana, who conducted that research, estimated that about 100 to 500 genes could influence Covid-19 susceptibility in sites like the lungs or nasal cavity.

Genetics is "likely to be a large contributor" to protection from Covid-19, he said. "I would never say it's the only contributor." In July, researchers identified a common genetic factor that could influence the severity of a coronavirus infection. In a study of more than 3,000 people, two genetic variations decreased the expression of a gene called OAS1, which is part of the innate immune response to viral infections. That was associated with an increased risk of Covid-19 hospitalization.

Increasing the gene's expression, then, should have the opposite effect — reducing the risk of severe disease — though it wouldn't necessarily prevent infection altogether. "It's very natural to get infected once you are exposed. There's no magic bullet for that. But after you get infected, how you're going to respond to this infection, that's what is going to be affected by your genetic variants," said Ludmila Prokunina-Olsson, the study's lead researcher and chief of the Laboratory of Translational Genomics at the National Cancer Institute. Still, Benjamin tenOever, a microbiology professor at the NYU Grossman School of Medicine who helped conduct the 2020 research, said it would be difficult for scientists to pinpoint a particular gene responsible for preventing a Covid infection.

"While there might still be certainly some genetics out there that do render people completely resistant, they're going to be incredibly hard to find," tenOever said. "People have already been looking intensely for two years with no actual results."

Vaccination Update as of July 20, 2022

4 860 311 627 fully vaccinated or 62.3 % Worldwide

222 950 035 fully vaccinated or 67.7 % US population

14 565 785 fully vaccinated or 68.7 % Florida population

950 392 fully vaccinated or 74.2 % Orange County

Latest News (US News)

A nasal vaccine still remains far off in the United States, though that isn't for lack of trying: There are numerous nasal vaccines for Covid in development in the country, Fauci said, but the vast majority are still in the preclinical stage or early on in human clinical trials. The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, which Fauci directs, is funding some early research on nasal vaccines.

Akiko Iwasaki, an immunologist at Yale University, is among the group of researchers working on a nasal vaccine.

Her team is looking at two approaches: a protein-based nasal spray and an mRNA vaccine delivered into the nose using nanoparticles.
